Artist Statement

I create a small natural oasis, getaways from the city concrete and everyday buzz, primary for my own needs, but also wishing to offer the same to a viewers. I try to induce the audience to stop by, think, get some rest. Evoking my own childhood's memories of touching tree bark roughness, grass tickling my bare feet, studying the veins of the leaf – and everything in the opposite of today's plastic keyboard under my fingers, pavement and steel, and other dominating impressions of everyday's surrounding of the contemporary office people.

According to the fast living situation, I've chosen digital technique for my artworks, but I use it in a way to present and overstate textural surfaces and colors that could be found only in natural environment with trees and herbs. With rich visual elements I am trying to suggest sounds of nature and fresh air.

Often, in my digital graphic I include partly readable words and sentences in a aim to provoke and keep the viewers interested. Within the texts I express emotions in a form of poems or a keywords, that audience can identify with. Using a unity of text and pictures I am trying to tell a story with each exhibition. Those are a personal stories, but close to and well known to the a lot of people.

My previous ten-year office job accumulated a lot of discontent deep inside of me. Job have taken the time I could spend in the piece and quite of nature, precious to an urban, contemporary people. Because of unsatisfaction, my artworks have been made more and more rich in details and textures. As I was more alienated from nature environment, text in my works have been going from totally unrecognizable handwriting, to big clear digital fonts, still trying to keep the visual harmony and quality of composition.

Since I am not working at the office, I prefer to make art during my camping in nature that are a big part of my life. I collect leaves, flat object from the trees and everything I can put in my scanner. I am taking a photos, drawing and painting – and letting emotions to guide me. Mixing all of those, I am making the impressions of every camping location I've visited.

I print my art on various surfaces (paper, canvas, cardboard...), but unique prints are always followed by original files, placed on a memory stick.

I am materialising the voice of nature that is trying to attract attention to importance of taking good care of environment and to gain respect as the one that everything had begun from.
